Historic Lawsuit to End the War on Drugs Heads to 9th Circuit Court of Appeals on April 1, 2025

Phoenix, AZ—On April 1, 2025, the 9th Circuit Court of Appeals will hear oral arguments in Murphey v. United States, et al. This groundbreaking lawsuit challenges the Controlled Substances Act (CSA) and two international drug control treaties arguing that these laws violate the U.S. Constitution by infringing on our cognitive liberty and due process rights.

“This is not about decriminalization. This is about exposing decades of unlawful investigations by the government and the World Health Organization (WHO).”

“For over 50 years, the U.S. government has justified drug prohibition by seeking to control not just substances, but human consciousness itself,” said Jennifer Murphey.

“This case exposes how the War on Drugs strips American citizens of their autonomy and mandates that the government dictate which thoughts, emotions, and states of mind are legally permissible.”

The lawsuit asserts that the government’s drug scheduling system is not based on public health or safety but on the desire to prevent certain subjective intimate experiences, especially those not profitable to the government—an overreach that infringes on fundamental human rights.

For decades the “War on Drugs” has imprisoned millions, destroyed countless lives and spirits, torn families apart, and given the government unchecked power. Now, for the first time in history, real change is within reach.

This legal battle was independently researched, created, and filed by Jennifer Murphey, who serves as the sole plaintiff and attorney. She is taking on the United States, DEA, FDA, HHS, and the State of Arizona in a case that has more potential than anything before it to finally bring an end to this unjust war.

The oral arguments on April 1, 2025 will be open to public attendance and live streamed.
